An atypical presentation of antineurofibromatosis type 1 (anti-Nf1) antibody-associated vasculitis is described in a 43-year-old female, who had no evidence of vasculitis during a 25-year follow-up. Because of pain in the lower extremities and weakness of the left foot, she was referred to our department. The symptoms had lasted about 5 months. Laboratory examination revealed the presence of the anti-Nf1 antibody in her serum, as well as positivity for C-reactive protein (CRP) and the erythrocyte sedimentation rate (ESR). Immunofluorescent microscopy of a biopsy specimen of the biceps femoris muscle disclosed non-necrotizing vasculitis, indicating a possible diagnosis of idiopathic vasculitis. Given the persistence of her symptoms, high-dose steroids and cyclophosphamide were administered. In a follow-up at the 6th month, complete recovery was observed and a minimal range of movement remained in the joint of the left foot. This report describes a case of a vasculitis with an atypical presentation as the initial manifestation of anti-Nf1 antibody-associated disease.Q: Formula to calculate debit
