They are stacked like so: Image1 Image2 Image3 I want the images to float left, and have different max-width to avoid them overflow the container. How to set an absolute max-width or max-height on the images? A: You can use CSS only, by specifying the image's display value. The html: The css: .container img { width: 400px; display: block; overflow: hidden; max-width: 400px; } A new study shows that women are generally less likely to develop depression or anxiety if they have high or low blood levels of omega-3 fatty acids — an observation that suggests that high levels of the essential fatty acid reduce a woman's risk of mental illness. The researchers based their finding on more than 2,000 people, part of the Women's Health Initiative, an ongoing program established in 1991 in order to study how hormones, diet, exercise and other factors affect the risk of heart disease and cancer. About 10 years into the program, the scientists started enrolling the women in a second, observational component that asked them about such conditions as depression and anxiety. The women in the study had three main meals per day, eaten while standing and without specific preparation instructions. They were also asked to keep a food diary.Q: Write query when searching in document fields I am developing an android app which uses Firebase to store some data. Since I can't store the user's location and some other info, I am storing the user's name and email in their documents. Now I need to search the name and email and the search query should look like:
